Educational aims of the programme

The premise of the History and English Literature degree is to encourage students to explore how the moment is captured and articulated in the present and the past. Given the complementary nature of these two distinct subject areas, students come to benefit from the development of critical thinking, close reading of source material and sustained arguments as a means to enhance their overall performance. Through the investigation of historical and contemporary issues students develop clarity of thought, problem-solving ability and facility in communication, whilst widening their experience and developing qualities of perception and judgment.

The distinctive features of the programme are:

Its core emphasis on reflexivity, the development of ability to reflect critically on the nature of History and English. This complemented by a concentration on the analysis of a variety of texts and genres across both subject areas.

A concentration on the modern and contemporary epochs in the programme provides a foundation for understanding issues in present society.

The close relationship between research and teaching. The fruits of staff research are used actively for learning and teaching and students have direct experience of work taking place at the frontiers of knowledge.

Its commitment to internationalisation, both in terms of the broad geographical range of modules but also opportunity to study abroad with partner institutions for 6 months and a dedicated field trip module to an overseas destination.

Within this context the aims of the programme are:

To offer a balanced and coherent programme of study to students from varied backgrounds choosing to study History and English Literature. The field of study is guided by the QAA Benchmark Statements for both History and English.

To provide students with a sound body of knowledge in History and English Literature as well as giving them access to a diverse range of source material, cultural forms and genres from the sixteenth century to the present.

To provide an intellectually challenging programme that develops critical insight into the nature and problems of study in the humanities and the problematics of reading and issues of language, representation and meaning through attention to the dynamics and histories of textual production, reception and interpretation.

To offer the opportunity for students to develop transferable skills within a practical and critical environment that progressively encourages increased responsibility for autonomous learning.

To encourage students to engage with the development of employability skills.

Teaching, Learning and Assessment

The methods used to enable outcomes to be achieved and demonstrated are as follows:

Surveys of periods and issues in history and literature, and frameworks for interpreting them, are made in lectures and other tutor-led teaching. Learning is consolidated, exemplified and used in the more student-centred contexts of workshops, document classes and seminars.

The assessment of knowledge is particularly sought through examinations, essays and project portfolios. The testing of understanding is focused on essays and examinations but is also achieved through class presentations and discussions.

Lectures or less formal tutor-led exposition in smaller groups and workshops aim to set cognitive developments in motion. Workshop discussion is the prime place for learning these skills through practice and a structured discussion of historical sources and arguments. Small group settings are used to set appropriate individual goals in relation to writing, research and reading, essay and examination preparation.

Varied types of assessment, including examinations, essays, projects, source analysis, blogs, and posters, allow the testing of prior cognitive development and develop and measure students' intellectual skills alongside their knowledge and understanding. Essays and exams offer the opportunity to undertake critical analysis and focus directly on an ability to construct rigorous argument. The variety of assessments offered provides a lateral means for students to approach intellectual development, with attention paid to students with particular needs (SENDA compliant).

All teaching and learning activities focus on developing and improving communication skills: lectures enable students to become effective listeners who can assimilate ideas and information; discussions in workshops and small group settings develop spoken communication skills, collaboration and interpersonal skills. Preparation and independent study, as with other arts and humanities subjects, outweighs contact time and students are supported to work independently (guided by tutors and Canvas technology) developing their own ideas and understanding.

All assessment utilized on the degree encourages students to develop their communication skills and to present arguments and ideas with precision and clarity. Achievement of good time management and organizational skills is demonstrated by students completing work on time to a satisfactory standard.

The programme progression moves students steadily towards accepting more responsibility for independent learning and the various assessment tasks together with workshop activities are the prime place for learning these skills through daily practice. The skills outlined above are central to every activity that is undertaken as part of the degree.

The development of transferable skills is a core aim of the programme, with the study of history allowing students to apply their knowledge and aptitude in a variety of employability settings.

Programme structure - programme rules and modules

The programme is taught and assessed within the academic framework. Students must take 120 credits of modules at each level of the programme (Levels, 4, 5 and 6). Each level of programme should normally be completed in one academic year. Modules are of two types: core or option. Modules are all of 20 credits, apart from the 60 credit study abroad module (L5) and the 40 credit dissertation (L6). Modules must be balanced across each semester to achieve equity, i.e., a maximum of 60-credits in each.

At L5, students must take at least 40 credits in both History and English Literature.

At Level-6 students must chose 40-credits from History and 40-credits from English Literature in addition to the dissertation, i.e., they must select two History option modules and two English Literature option modules.

All modules are core at L4, at L5 the module 'Debates in History' is core, while at L6 students must select the History Dissertation Module (6100HIST). A selection of the validated option modules will run each year.

Students may select from the work-based/work-related learning options: 5119ENGL English Work Experience, 5129HIST. Teaching History, and 5130HIST History Works. The English Independent Study modules (5120ENGL and 6108ENGL) are designed to allow students to pursue established projects or intellectual interests and are reserved for exceptional circumstances. They may be taken only with the agreement of the Subject Leaders.

Study trips are offered to all students via core and option modules.

Students will be allocated a personal tutor based in History in L4 who will teach them at this level and normally remain their personal tutor throughout their time at LJMU.

The programme will offer the opportunity for 60 credits of study abroad at L5. Students will be enrolled on a 480 credit honours with study abroad programme. A 60 credit Level 5 study abroad module, 5119HIST, will normally replace the second semester modules on the standard programme. This study abroad should cover the same learning outcomes as the modules being replaced. The modules to be studied in the host institution must be agreed in advance. The Level 5 mean for the final award mark will be calculated based upon the 120 credits at Level 5.

The programme will also offer the opportunity of an additional study year abroad following Level 5. Students will be enrolled on a 480 credit honours with study abroad programme. Of those 480 credits, 120 will be taken via a Level 5 study abroad module, 5118HIST. The modules to be studied in the host institution must be agreed in advance. The Level 5 mean for the final award mark will be calculated based upon the 240 credits at Level 5.

The programme follows a three-stage progression through L4, L5 and L6. Via core modules at L4 students will be introduced to a variety of geographical settings, methodological issues and source materials that intend, through a varied assessment matrix, to develop the key skills and practices necessary for them to advance at Levels 5 & 6 (e.g. understanding of primary/secondary sources, source analysis, close reading of texts, ability to work independently and in a group).

Level 5 is a bridge between Level 4 and Level 6, building on the cognitive and transferable skills acquired in first year and preparing students for their final year. It aims to further develop students' appreciation of the subject areas of History and English Literature, while acknowledging their diverse fields, by offering a broad range of module options that focus on developing a comparative perspective and individual subject knowledge in these two subject areas.

Level 6 is the culmination of the History and English Literature degree at which point students, building upon their independent learning and research skills developed at Levels 4 and 5, take increased initiative and greater personal responsibility over the pursuit of their studies. At Level 6, students have the opportunity to gain a high degree of specialisation in their chosen topics by choosing research led modules with staff who are actively publishing in these two subject areas.

Students at Level 6 also draw upon their skills as researchers and independent learners, honed through Levels 4 and 5, to pursue an original, primary source focused independent research project in the form of the Dissertation. Students can undertake their own research project in either History or English Literature or by developing a multi-disciplinary research project that draws on their both subject areas.

Students beginning the programme prior to September 2022 will remain on the previous validated versions of modules unless going on a leave of absence / have been awarded Final Module Attempts by the Board of Examiners, which may require that they move to the new programme version of all modules. In addition, continuing students will also be able to select from modules 5108HIST, 5111HIST, 5132HIST and 6130HIST.

Information about assessment regulations

All programmes leading to LJMU awards operate within the University's Academic Framework.
<https://www.ljmu.ac.uk/about-us/public-information/academic-quality-and-regulations/academic-framework>

Opportunities for work-related learning (location and nature of activities)

All LJMU undergraduate programs are required to incorporate into a L4 module an assessment item of the submission of a personal Self Awareness Statement; this is administered through the Exploring History module. Students have the opportunity to choose from work-based/related/transferrable skills modules at L5 and L6, while the programme's PDP system provides opportunities for students to reflect on and document their achievements inside and outside of university and think about future employability paths.

Methods for evaluating and improving the quality and standards of teaching and learning

Student Feedback and Evaluation

The University uses the results of student feedback from internal and external student surveys (such as module evaluations, the NSS and PTES), module evaluation questionnaires and meetings with student representatives to improve the quality of programmes.

Staff development

The quality of teaching is assured through staff review and staff development in learning, teaching and assessment.

Internal Review

All programmes are reviewed annually and periodically, informed by a range of data and feedback, to ensure quality and standards of programmes and to make improvements to programmes.

External Examining

External examiners are appointed to programmes to assess whether:

- the University is maintaining the threshold academic standards set for awards in accordance with the FHEQ and applicable subject benchmark statements
- the assessment process measures student achievement rigorously and fairly against the intended outcomes of the programme(s) and is conducted in line with University policies and regulations
- the academic standards are comparable with those in other UK higher education institutions of which external examiners have experience
- the achievement of students are comparable with those in other UK higher education institutions of which the external examiners have experience and to provide informative comment and recommendations on:

- good practice and innovation relating to learning, teaching and assessment observed by external examiners

- opportunities to enhance the quality of the learning opportunities provided to students

Please note:

This specification provides a concise summary of the main features of the programme and the learning outcomes that a typical student might reasonably be expected to achieve and demonstrate if he/she takes full advantage of the learning opportunities that are provided. More detailed information on the learning outcomes, content, teaching, learning and assessment methods of each module can be found in module and programme guides.
