Educational aims of the programme

The programme rests on the belief that the study of history is essential for understanding contemporary society and its problems. Investigating historical issues helps develop clarity of thought, problem-solving ability and facility in communication, while the study of the past widens students' experience and develops qualities of perception and judgment. The study of history and obtaining of a degree is a 'public good' as it develops an awareness of differing values, systems and societies; however, it also provides students with a range of valuable transferable skills of great value for future careers.

The distinctive features of the programme are:

Its core emphasis on reflexivity, the development of ability to reflect critically on the nature of history, the methods used by historians and history's function in society.

Its concentration on modern history (from around 1700) as an essential basis for understanding contemporary society and its problems.

The close relationship between research and teaching. The fruits of staff research are used actively for learning and teaching and students have direct experience of work taking place at the frontiers of historical knowledge.

Its commitment to internationalization, both in terms of the broad geographical range of modules but also opportunity to study abroad with partner institutions and a dedicated field trip module to an overseas destination.

Within this context the aims of the programme are:

To offer a balanced and coherent programme of study to students from varied backgrounds choosing to study history. The field of study is guided by the QAA Benchmark Statement History.

To provide students with a sound body of historical knowledge.

To provide an intellectually challenging programme that develops critical insight into the nature and problems of historical study.

To offer the opportunity for students to develop historical and transferable skills within a practical and critical environment that progressively encourages increased responsibility for autonomous learning.

To encourage students to engage with the development of employability skills.

Alternative Exit/ Interim Award Learning Outcomes - Certificate of Higher Education (Fnd)

A student who is eligible for this award will be able to:

- Have made the transition from A Level, Access or other previous study to degree level History.
- Have developed an understanding of key historical concepts in a range of areas of study, including aspects of British history and the history of the wider world.
- Have acquired enhanced competence in writing, presentation skills that allow for the interrogation of the past.
- Have acquired competence in referencing and bibliographical techniques.
- Be able to interrogate historical documents in a critical way.
- Be able to participate in group work and discussion.
- Have acquired habits of professionalism, time-management, self-awareness and personal responsibility.

Alternative Exit/ Interim Award Learning Outcomes - Diploma of Higher Education (Fnd)

A student who is eligible for this award will be able to:

- Have become more independent in their approach to study.
- Identify, correlate and critically examine a range of historical documents pertinent to an area of study.
- Identify different interpretations of the past, and certain theoretical techniques for interrogating the past, and make informed judgements about them.
- Have deepened their knowledge of particular historical periods and geographical regions.
- Have acquired advanced competence in research and presentation skills that allow for the interrogation of the past.
- Write extensive pieces of work of a discursive and critical nature.

Target award Learning Outcomes - Bachelor of Arts with Honours (Fnd)

A student successfully completing the programme of study will have acquired the following subject knowledge and understanding as well as skills and other attributes.

A student who is eligible for this award will be able to:

1. Command a body of historical knowledge from c.1700 to the present day encompassing an awareness of continuity and change over time.
2. Demonstrate a range of geographical understanding incorporating the history of Britain, Europe, and the wider world.
3. Recognise unfamiliar structures, cultures and belief systems.
4. Locate, gather and critically analyse secondary and contemporary sources.
5. Locate, gather and critically analyse primary sources.
6. Demonstrate an understanding of the complex nature of reconstructing the past and then apply those ideas.
7. Demonstrate intellectual independence, asking questions, pursuing structured enquiries and solving problems.
8. Criticise the historical record demonstrating awareness of a range of viewpoints.
9. Apply innovative and creative approaches to learning that harness the potential of technology.
10. Illustrate critical yet tolerant personal attitudes.
11. Demonstrate an ability to work independently.
12. Demonstrate an ability to work effectively as part of a group.
13. Marshal an argument in written form.

15. Demonstrate an ability to communicate information, ideas, problems and solutions to both specialist and non-specialist audiences.
16. Demonstrate the knowledge, skills and experience valued by employers, and identify such qualities in oneself.

Teaching, Learning and Assessment

The methods used to enable outcomes to be achieved and demonstrated are as follows:

The methods used to enable outcomes to be achieved and demonstrated are as follows:

Surveys of periods and issues in history, and frameworks for interpreting them, are made in lectures and other tutor-led teaching. Learning is consolidated, exemplified and used in the more student-centred contexts of workshops, seminars, tutorials, individual supervision, online activities, and fieldtrips.

Lectures or less formal tutor-led exposition in smaller groups and workshops aim to set cognitive developments in motion. Workshop discussion is the prime place for learning these skills through practice and a structured discussion of historical sources and arguments. Small group settings are used to set appropriate individual goals in relation to writing, research and reading, essay and examination preparation.

Varied types of assessment, including essays, examinations (seen and unseen), portfolios (incorporating short written pieces and oral presentations), literature reviews, source analyses, independent research projects, blogs and websites, and posters, allow the testing of prior cognitive development and develop and measure students' intellectual skills alongside their knowledge and understanding. Essays, portfolios and exams offer the opportunity to undertake critical analysis and focus directly on an ability to construct rigorous argument. The variety of assessments offered provides a lateral means for students to approach intellectual development, with attention paid to students with particular needs (SENDA compliant).

All teaching and learning activities focus on developing and improving communication skills: lectures enable students to become effective listeners who can assimilate ideas and information; discussions in workshops and small group settings develop spoken communication skills, collaboration and interpersonal skills. Preparation and independent study, as with other humanities subjects, outweighs contact time and students are supported to work independently (guided by tutors and Canvas technology) developing their own ideas and understanding of historical events.

All assessment utilized on the degree encourages students to develop their communication skills and to present arguments and ideas with precision and clarity. Achievement of good time management and organizational skills is demonstrated by students completing work on time to a satisfactory standard.

The programme progression moves students steadily towards accepting more responsibility for independent learning and the various assessment tasks together with workshop activities are the prime place for learning these skills through daily practice. The skills outlined above are central to every activity that is undertaken as part of the degree.

The development of transferable skills is a core aim of the programme, with the study of history allowing students to apply their knowledge and aptitude in a variety of employability settings.

Programme structure - programme rules and modules

The programme is taught and assessed within the academic framework. Students must take 120 credits of history modules at each level of the programme (Levels 3, 4, 5 and 6). Each level of programme should normally be completed in one academic year. Modules are of two types: core or option. Modules are all of 20 credits, apart from the 60 credit study abroad module (L5) and the 40 credit dissertation (L6). Modules must be balanced across each semester to achieve equity, i.e., a maximum of 60-credits in each.

All modules are core at L3 and L4, in L5 the modules 'Debates in History' and the 'Research paper' are core, while in L6 the Dissertation module is core. Students, as can be seen below, will be offered a range of options but it should be noted that not all of these will run every year and those listed are an indication of the type of modules offered in any given year.

After typically working with a common member of staff acting as personal tutor to all Foundation students on the History pathway at L3, as students move into L4 they will be allocated a personal tutor from within History who will teach them at this level and normally remain their personal tutor throughout their time at LJMU.

The programme will offer the opportunity for 60 credits of study abroad at L5. Students will be enrolled on a 480 credit honours with study abroad programme. A 60 credit Level 5 study abroad module, 5119HIST, will normally replace the second semester modules on the standard programme. This study abroad should cover the same learning outcomes as the modules being replaced. The modules to be studied in the host institution must be agreed in advance. The Level 5 mean for the final award mark will be calculated based upon the 120 credits at Level 5.

The programme will also offer the opportunity of an additional study year abroad following Level 5. Students will be enrolled on a 600 credit honours with study abroad programme. Of those 600 credits, 120 will be taken via a Level 5 study abroad module, 5118HIST. The modules to be studied in the host institution must be agreed in advance. The Level 5 mean for the final award mark will be calculated based upon the 240 credits at Level 5.

The programme follows a four-stage progression through L3, L4, L5 and L6. Via core modules at L4 students will be introduced to a variety of geographical and methodological issues that intend, through a varied assessment matrix, to develop the key skills and practices necessary for them to advance at Levels 5 & 6 (e.g. understanding of primary/secondary sources, source analysis, close reading of texts, ability to work independently and in a group).

Level 5 is a bridge between Level 4 and Level 6, building on the cognitive and transferable skills acquired in first year and preparing students for their final year. It aims to further develop in students an appreciation of the diversity of history by offering a broad range of module options that focus on developing a comparative perspective and historical awareness. In line with the subject benchmark statement for history, students will choose modules from thematic strands that will ensure they continue their broad exploration of world events and appreciate the diverse theoretical and methodological ways history can be examined.

Level 6 is the culmination of the history degree at which point students, building upon their independent learning and research skills developed at Levels 4 and 5, take increased initiative and greater personal responsibility over the pursuit of their studies. At Level 6, students have the opportunity to gain a high degree of specialisation in their chosen topics, following intensive research-led modules with staff actively publishing in these areas.

Students at Level 6 also draw upon their skills as researchers and independent learners, honed through Levels 4 and 5, to pursue an original, primary source-focused independent research project in the form of the History Dissertation.

Students beginning the programme prior to September 2022 will remain on the previous validated versions of the modules unless going on a leave of absence / have been awarded Final Module Attempts by the Board of Examiners, which may require that they move to the new programme version of all modules. In addition, continuing students will also be able to select from modules 5108HIST, 5111HIST, 5132HIST and 6130HIST.

Information about assessment regulations

All programmes leading to LJMU awards operate within the University's Academic Framework.
<https://www.ljmu.ac.uk/about-us/public-information/academic-quality-and-regulations/academic-framework>

Opportunities for work-related learning (location and nature of activities)

All LJMU undergraduate programs are required to incorporate into a L4 module an assessment item of the submission of a personal Self Awareness Statement; this is administered through the 'Exploring History' module. Students have the opportunity to choose from work-based/related/transferrable skills modules at L5 and L6, while the programme's PDP system provides opportunities for students to reflect on and document their achievements inside and outside of university and think about future employability paths.

Criteria for admission

A/AS Level

72 UCAS tariff points from a minimum of 2 A Levels. Maximum of 20 AS points accepted.

BTEC National Diploma

72 UCAS tariff points.

Irish Leaving Certificate

72 UCAS tariff points with a maximum 20 UCAS Tariff points from Ordinary Level.

Scottish Higher

72 UCAS points to include Advanced Higher.

External Quality Benchmarks

All programmes leading to LJMU awards have been designed and approved in accordance with the UK Quality Code for Higher Education, including the Framework for Higher Education Qualifications in the UK (FHEQ) and subject benchmark statements where applicable.

The University is subject to periodic review of its quality and standards by the Quality Assurance Agency (QAA). Published review reports are available on the QAA website at www.qaa.ac.uk

Programmes which are professionally accredited are reviewed by professional, statutory and regulatory bodies (PSRBs) and such programmes must meet the competencies/standards of those PSRBs.

Support for students and their learning

The University aims to provide students with access to appropriate and timely information, support and guidance to ensure that they are able to benefit fully from their time at LJMU. All students are assigned a Personal Tutor to provide academic support and when necessary signpost students to the appropriate University support services.

Students are able to access a range of professional services including:

- Advice on practical aspects of study and how to use these opportunities to support and enhance their personal and academic development. This includes support for placements and careers guidance.
- Student Advice and Wellbeing Services provide students with advice, support and information, particularly in the areas of: student funding and financial matters, disability, advice and support to international students, study support, accommodation, health, wellbeing and counselling.
- Students studying for an LJMU award at a partner organisation will have access to local support services

Methods for evaluating and improving the quality and standards of teaching and learning

Student Feedback and Evaluation

The University uses the results of student feedback from internal and external student surveys (such as module evaluations, the NSS and PTES), module evaluation questionnaires and meetings with student representatives to improve the quality of programmes.

Staff development

The quality of teaching is assured through staff review and staff development in learning, teaching and assessment.

Internal Review

All programmes are reviewed annually and periodically, informed by a range of data and feedback, to ensure quality and standards of programmes and to make improvements to programmes.

External Examining

External examiners are appointed to programmes to assess whether:

- the University is maintaining the threshold academic standards set for awards in accordance with the FHEQ and applicable subject benchmark statements
- the assessment process measures student achievement rigorously and fairly against the intended outcomes of the programme(s) and is conducted in line with University policies and regulations
- the academic standards are comparable with those in other UK higher education institutions of which external examiners have experience
- the achievement of students are comparable with those in other UK higher education institutions of which the external examiners have experience and to provide informative comment and recommendations on:

- good practice and innovation relating to learning, teaching and assessment observed by external examiners
- opportunities to enhance the quality of the learning opportunities provided to students

Please note:

This specification provides a concise summary of the main features of the programme and the learning outcomes that a typical student might reasonably be expected to achieve and demonstrate if he/she takes full advantage of the learning opportunities that are provided. More detailed information on the learning outcomes, content, teaching, learning and assessment methods of each module can be found in module and programme guides.
